

Call for Courses

for the Degrowth Summer School from 19th to 23rd August 2017 in the Rhineland

This year, from August 18 to 23, for the third time in a row the Degrowth Summer School will take place at the Climate Camp in the Rhineland. We are looking for people who would like to offer a 4-day course at the Summer School.

Summer School courses

At the Summer School, people come together to analyse political, economic and social developments and discuss concepts of a degrowth society. At the heart of the Summer School are the 4-day courses in which participants can learn about a topic in depth. Additionally, we will dive into scientific and political debates through lectures and panel discussions.

This year, the Summer School focusses on the subjects „social-ecological transformation in the Rhenish brown coal region“, „skills for system change“ and „psychology of transformation“. We are looking for about 10 courses, especially for the 1st and 2nd topic and very welcome if held in English. The courses will take place from the 20th to 23rd of August with 2.5 hours each morning, should be designed for 20-30 participants and can involve diverse formats (e.g. practical activities, inputs, discussions, group work). We cannot offer access to electronic devices (e.g. projector).

Course instructors organize their own accommodation – it is possible to sleep in your own tent at the camp like all participants, where we will also be provided with delicious food from the camp kitchen. There is a potential expense allowance of up to 400€. In exceptional cases, 2-day courses are possible.

We will look through course applications by the end of May, put together a programme and get back to you. Please keep in mind that we can only accept few courses this year!

We are looking forward to hearing from you!

Best wishes,
the programme group of the Summer School
